These maps of the island of Timor, the easternmost part of the Indonesian archipelago, were drawn from the great works of ancient Greek cartographers, which are to be found in the `Kitchen of Geography` in the collection of the Bodleian Library at Oxford. Three of these works, namely, the two volumes of the atlas of Eratosthenes (c. 275BC), and the map of Claudius Ptolemy (c. AD200), represented the three great features of Timor: the island of Timor itself, the Timor Sea and the Molucca Sea. The map in Figure 5 clearly shows Timor as an island, the island of Badai, to the southwest of it, and the island of Timor near the end of the island of Badai. The first part of the island is called "Kadena" and the rest "Betekayt" or Timor. `Books in 16th Century Greek` The Texts,
